2. Barred Combinations

ASDAN Personal and Social Development qualifications: Rules of Combination (RoC) and barred combinations of units

Learners may work towards units at a mixture of different levels (sometimes referred to as a spiky profile). For example, a learner working towards an Award at Level 1, must complete at least 5 credits at Level 1 but may also complete 3 credits or more from units at Entry 3 or up to 3 credits at Level 2, as appropriate to their learning level in each unit topic.

Please note, only one unit from each row can contribute credit towards a qualification; credit from the unit at the highest level contributes.

3. Recognition of prior learning, including credit transfer and exemptions

ASDAN Personal and Social Development qualifications: Rules of Combination (RoC) and barred combinations of units

Credit from equivalent units, or units/qualifications with the same or similar content, achieved in the context of another qualification, may contribute towards the achievement of a full qualification.

Prior achievement of some units from ASDAN programmes and short courses may mean that a learner does not need to repeat the learning needed for certain units, recognition of prior learning (RPL).

Credit transfer, exemptions and RPL are only eligible for units/learning achieved within the three years prior to the qualification moderation date.

In all instances where achievement is claimed through credit transfer/exemption/RPL, centres are responsible for carrying out sufficient and effective assessment and internal quality assurance and following the correct procedure as detailed in the ASDAN Recognition of Prior Learning and Credit Accumulation and Transfer Policy and Procedures document. Award is dependent on successful external moderation.
